

Bridging the cultural divide

SU AZIZ takes a glimpse at some recent publications that contain dollops of local flavours and colour.

MALAYSIA'S AMAZING HERITAGE PUBLISHED BY DiGi / 213 PAGES

Three years ago, DiGi started its corporate responsibility programme on our heritage initiative. This is where heritage practitioners spend almost half a year teaching youths about their particular craft and its tradition.

This book is not only testimony to those practitioners, now dubbed an "Amazing Malaysian", but also "gives a flavour of what took place as the 15 projects unravelled...".

It is an exciting and passionate account of our traditional arts, crafts and architecture.

The project has bridged cultural gaps between the multiracial youths and their country's multicultural heritage.

A coffee-table book that will definitely make for interesting dinner conversation.
